Awareness key to safe mail delivery

By Capt. Dani Johnson

U.S. Air Forces in Europe Public Affairs

RAMSTEIN AIR BASE, Germany - The Sept. 11 attacks on Washington and New York, coupled with the recent detection of anthrax in the U.S. mail at locations within the United States, have prompted postal officials to ask for increased awareness by postal patrons.

"If something about a piece of mail doesn't seem right, show it to your postmaster," said Roger Kolkena, U.S. Air Forces in Europe Air Postal Squadron spokesman. "He or she is trained to recognize dangerous mail and will contact the appropriate personnel as necessary."

Much of our thinking and preparation in the past was directed toward explosives, but we also must consider other threats, such as chemical and biological.

"A number of facilities in U.S. communities have received anthrax threat letters - many were empty letters - while others contained a powdery substance," said USAFE medical spokesman, Lt. Col. Fred Kelsey. "The key is not to panic because panic can lead to carelessness and a potential spreading of the mailed substance."

While some of the suspect letters have contained a white powder, that's not the only indicator of a potential threat. Other characteristics of suspicious packages and letters, identified by the postal service and the Centers for Disease Control, include the following:

- Excessive postage
- Handwritten or poorly typed addresses
- Incorrect titles
- Title, but no name
- Misspellings of common words
- Oily stains, discolorations or odor
- No return address
- Excessive weight

CFC-Overseas underway at Spangdahlem Air Base

Campaign continues through December

Compiled from staff reports

The Combined Federal Campaign-Overseas, part of the largest public sector fund-raising drive in the world, is currently ongoing at Spangdahlem Air Base.

Typically, CFC ends in mid-November, but this year's campaign was extended a month to allow for mailing delays and deployments, according to Greg Sassman, CFC European director.

As of Oct. 19, only 28 percent of eligible people at Spangdahlem AB and its geographically-separated units had been contacted, according to Master Sgt. Viking White, area project officer for CFC at Spangdahlem AB. People donating have given a total of $38,328.

Last year's campaign throughout the European command raised more than $5.2 million. People from the 52nd Fighter Wing contributed more than $245,000 to CFC.

This year's campaign has more than 1,300 charities from which to choose, including local programs. Wing members pledged more than $9,000 to local support agencies last year.

During the campaign season, donors can designate contributions to a variety of American and international charities through CFC-O, said Renee Acosta, president of the campaign management organization for the CFC-O.

Accidents

By Staff Sgt. Edward D. Paxton
52nd Security Forces Squadron
Reports and Analysis

Eighteen Team Eifel members experienced vehicle accidents in the past week, two of which were major.

The first major accident occurred when a person traveling on B-257 was rear-ended by a vehicle speeding near Birtlingen. Both vehicles were totaled, and the occupants of both vehicles were transported to the Bitburg Krankenhaus with possible injuries.

The second accident occurred on B-50 adjacent to Albachmühle. An airman entered a right curve while traveling approximately 60-70 kph, lost control and landed in a ditch. Investigation by Bitburg Polizei determined the airman was under the influence of alcohol. The vehicle damage consisted of a cracked windshield, broken headlight and a damaged wheel, but there wasn't serious injury.

The 16 minor accidents involved:

■ One was driving too fast for road conditions.

■ One was improper backing.

■ One animal strike.

■ 13 were from inattentive driving.

In addition, 21 citations were issued.

Security forces wishes everyone a happy Halloween. Also, if you're driving during Halloween, use extra precautions. Don't take your eyes off the road to look at the children in costumes.

Remember, the speed limit is 30 kph in military housing areas, but it won't hurt to reduce your speed a bit more on Halloween.

- Lopsided or uneven envelope
- Protruding wires or aluminum foil
- Visual distractions
- Noises from package
- Marked with restrictive endorsements, such as "Personal" or "Confidential"

■ Shows a city or state in the postmark that does not match the return address

"Though the likelihood of receiving dangerous mail is extremely small," said Kolkena, "we urge postal customers to be cautious when accepting mail from unknown sources."

If a suspicious package or letter is received, do not handle the piece of mail. Cover the envelope or package with anything (clothing, paper, trash can, etc.) and do not remove this cover.

Also, make sure damaged or suspicious packages are isolated and the immediate area is closed off. Notify the postmaster or your supervisor and immediately contact OSI and security forces.

Document all people who have touched the parcel in question. In the documentation, include contact information and provide this to responding law enforcement.

"If the piece of mail was handled, have all those who came in contact with the mail, wash their hands thoroughly with soap and water," said Kelsey. Place all items worn when in contact with the suspected mail in a plastic bag and have it available for law enforcement officials.

As soon as practical, shower with soap and water. Contact the base medical treatment facility for assessment and potential treatment.

"Postal employees are aware of the current situation and their role in force protection," added Kolkena. "(They) are keeping an extra close eye out for dangerous mail indicators."

Focus on energy awareness

Month-long campaign educates public about monetary savings

By Master Sgt. Darryl G. Knowles
52nd Fighter Wing energy manager

Imagine the light at the end of the tunnel has been turned off due to budget cuts and efforts to save even the smallest amount of energy.

Don't be alarmed; the situation is not this bad yet. However, by Presidential Executive Order 13123, all government facilities must reduce their energy consumption by 35 percent in 2010 compared to what was used in 1985. For this reason, October is designated by the Department of Energy as "Energy Awareness Month."

Spangdahlem Air Base spent more than $6.8 million in utility bills for fiscal 2001. Past experience shows public energy awareness can conservatively save 2 percent of this cost — or $137,000.

The objective of Energy Awareness Month is to heighten public awareness of ways to save energy by changing personal habits. Here's a small list that can help save energy:

■ Make a habit of turning off unnecessary lighting when leaving an area.

■ Using "sleep" mode instead of monitor screen savers reduces the electric load 93 percent.

■ Turning the monitor off when not at the work station saves $36.80 annually.

■ The average personal computer left on after duty hours costs $459.90 annually.

■ Laser printers use 300 watts; inkjets use only 10 watts with similar quality.

■ For three copies or less, use the printer; for more, use the copier.

■ Using the "stand-by" button on your copier lightens the energy load by 70 percent.

■ Coffee makers use the same amount of power as 15 standard light bulbs when left on.

■ Wear warmer clothes and turn down the heat to 68 degrees.

■ Try a fan to circulate warm air in the room instead of using a space heater.

■ Walk to get mail or to run other errands instead of driving.

Everyone can think of more efficient ways of going about their average routine. Remember a culture of efficiency starts with the little things.

At the end of the year, saving $137,000 in energy costs can buy one of the following:

■ 7,000 square feet of carpet for offices

■ 34,250 square feet of repaved roads and parking lots

■ 1.1 miles of new sidewalks

■ Paint for 17 average-sized buildings

■ 63 new personal computers

In addition to energy awareness and conservation efforts, alternatives are being sought to improve energy consumption.

In July, Spangdahlem AB was included in an $83 million Energy Savings Performance Contract (ESPC).

The new ESPC contractor will provide upfront investment dollars to upgrade equipment, systems and incorporate new technologies into existing facilities.

Once the improvements start producing savings in the base energy bill, the contractor will be paid from those savings.

This new contracting tool helps ensure the highest possible energy saving measures are incorporated into facilities, while allowing the base more flexibility with a dwindling budget.

With funding continually falling short of expanding needs, the necessity to conserve resources has never been greater.

Each person doing his or her part makes the biggest difference, as always.

Conserving energy keeps that light at the end of the tunnel lighted.

Gamers combat virtual terrorist in activities center

Services LAN gaming party offers another avenue for fun on Spangdahlem AB

By Senior Airman Jennifer Lindsey
52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

Airman Ortiz Raimundo moved quickly and cautiously through the aircraft. Equipped with an automatic rifle, the 606th Air Control Squadron member fired at a door in the floor he believed concealed a terrorist, but he was wrong. The terrorist was behind another door and he fires a fatal shot at Raimundo's chest. But Raimundo doesn't want to quit yet and with the click of a mouse, he was playing Counterstrike again - this time wiser about opponent's tactics.

Raimundo and about 29 other gamers linked systems in the community activities center Saturday to play in the 52nd Services Squadron local-area network gaming party. Judging from the early turnout, the party gained some popularity since the first party in September where only 12 people showed.

One of the reasons for LAN gaming popularity is its simplicity. All people need is a computer with networking capabilities, monitor, keyboard, mouse, headphones, 220-volt electrical cables and a desire to play, said Staff Sgt. Mark Mullen, 52nd Logistics Readiness Squadron (Provisional), who in his spare time coordinated the event.

"You don't need to know anything about computers or the games because someone here will gladly help you set up," he said.

At the first party, gamers filled all the connections in the only port services had available. But this time there's two, and again, every usable connection was filled.

"Each party the port gets filled we're going to purchase another one so over time the party's going to get pretty big," Mullen said. "The more players, the better."

Players range from beginners to seasoned gaming veterans. Alias' create an even playing field where airmen can fire injudiciously at NCOs playing terrorists.

A gaming die-hard, Staff Sgt. Gary Holt, 52nd LRS (P), also participates in German LAN-gaming parties and is one of 140 members in a local gaming group. Although he doesn't speak German, Holt said it isn't a problem because most of the gamers understand English and once the game begins, there's little conversation. The appeal of LAN-gaming parties compared to online gaming is in the timing, Holt said.

"In LAN gaming, there's very little lag time," he said. "Some online games can take 120 milliseconds or more to respond after a play is made. LAN gaming time takes only 18 or less, so it's closer to real-time."

LAN gaming also offers social interaction with people who have common interests, Holt said.

"There are people here from other shops I wouldn't normally get to meet," he said. "It's nice seeing each other and to get to know the person you 'killed' in the last game."

Raimundo, who also plays games online, joined the LAN party on a friend's invitation.

"It's something fun to do that's pretty exciting," he said, as he put on his headphones and prepared for his next Counterstrike adventure.

The next gaming party is scheduled for Nov. 10. Call the community activities center at 452-6567 for more information.

Senior Airman Jennifer Lindsey
Staff Sgt. Mark Mullen, 52nd Logistics Readiness Squadron (Provisional), as well as 52nd SVS LAN gaming party coordinator, right, helps gaming newcomer Senior Airman Chuck Tomlin, 52nd Equipment Maintenance Squadron, set up his computer to play. To participate, gamers just need to bring their personal computer with networking capabilities, monitor, keyboard, mouse, headphones and 220-volt electrical cables.

Commander's thoughts

Is the glass half full or half empty? It depends on how you look at it. Essentially, it all comes down to perspective.

By Lt. Col. Kurt Kaiser
52nd Civil Engineer Squadron commander

It was Sunday evening, Oct. 7, and I was watching football when a special news report came on to tell me we just bombed Afghanistan.

First thought - funny how Dan Rather knows before I do! Second thought, hope we knocked the heck out their infrastructure and anti-aircraft artillery sites ... wonder if there were any Wild Weasels?

Now I understand why a squadron commander called me earlier in the day wanting to get some chemical warfare refresher training for his guys. I didn't ask specifics and didn't hesitate to call our readiness flight to give his people a quick short course on how to inspect their masks and survive chems. Later that evening, I learned from my CW instructor that the deployers had about 45 minutes before they left. He was smiling, pleased he could be there to help.

It all works, folks. The system works just fine when you look at situations in a positive way and work together to get the job done.

For the welfare of others, there was no hesitation by the commander when he asked for training and none on the other end by the NCO in providing it. Funny, how, when in times of crisis, things seem to go much better. It's why everyone is chomping at the bit to get the call to deploy.

Job satisfaction is up all the way around when people are deployed. Everyone leaning forward to do their part, whatever they can, to get the job done. Their perspective is crystal clear - the only thing that really matters is the mission. Wouldn't it be great if we could work like that on a daily basis? We can ... it's all in how you view your world.

I contend we all have had a new lease on life in the wake of the terrorist attacks in the United States. Suddenly, our concerns seem petty compared to those of the families shattered by the deaths and missing of their loved ones.

By putting our problems aside and thinking of others, have you noticed the world is getting along much better? We have a whole new world order.

Politics aside, it is bipartisanship like never before. Wouldn't it be great if we could bottle this new, cooperative atmosphere and bring it closer to home, to our families and workplace? We can ... by going with the flow instead of against it.

Think about those people you work closely with. You know the ones who add to the unit and the ones who seem to take away from it.

It's easy to spot the ones that ignite the whole unit, that people look to for the way ahead. It's easy to spot others that are destined for the spit's office. Which are you?

Are you having fun being in the military and feel lucky to be in a garden spot like Germany or are you the alternative? Does it show? Do you pick your unit up or drag it down? Are you an "upbeat" or a "woe is me" type?

Everyone has a choice about the role they play on the team. We all volunteered to be here and right now it seems like everyone is fighting to be first in line to stand on the front line in the defense of our nation. We have a common purpose. We're talking a major esprit-de-corps event happening here.

Wouldn't it be great if the positive energy that is uniting our military members like never before could go on for years? It can ... think of what happened after Pearl Harbor. Do you believe it's happening again? Sure it is!

It's easy for me to write this as I see many examples of people that see the glass half full every day. In the cops and augmentees pulling all night shifts; Unit Control Centers controlling deployment messages like a New York street traffic cop, airmen all over the wing volunteering to make it happen; wives, husbands and kids pulling the load so dad or mom can get the job done; and the civilians - wow!

U.S. and host nation civilians have really picked up the load. Our German hosts have supported us like this happened in their country, to their people.

If ever there was the secret to the reason why everyone in the Air Force wants to come to Spangdahlem Air Base it's because there are no better Air Force civilians in the world who take such great care of the military.

Right now, it seems like the glass is overflowing it is so full. The motto I came into the Air Force with - "It's a Great Way of Life" is truer today than it's felt in a long time. Wouldn't it be great if we could capture this feeling, to be an indispensable member of the U.S. Air Force, privileged to be in this spot where millions of Americans would love to be right now. We can ... if we have the right perspective.

Bitburg Annex parking

Questions: With parking a premium on the Bitburg Annex, particularly with regard to the chapel, base exchange and bank, could the new and used car sales not park cars perpendicular so as to take up two spaces? This would free up more parking for customers.

If that's not acceptable, could AAFES move the cars to the commissary parking lot temporarily?

Is it also possible to establish 15-minute time limits on the parking spaces in front of the bank so people can take care of banking business and use the ATM machines easier?

Answers: Good idea on the car sales parking! I apologize that this problem wasn't noticed sooner. We will move the cars immediately so they won't take up so many parking spaces.

We are always looking for ideas to improve the parking and traffic situation on Spangdahlem AB and the Bitburg Annex. Overall, expect parking to continue to be at a premium due to current force protection conditions.

I like your suggestion for ATM users and will establish two 15-minute parking spots in front of the bank. Civil engineers are currently making the signs and should be able to install them in a few days.

If there are other suggestions or recommendations on parking or any other traffic proposal, please submit an Air Force Form 332 through your facility manager, or call the CE customer service section at 452-6686 (Spangdahlem AB) or 452-9156 (Bitburg Annex).

Trick or treating

Question: Many of the residents of the government-leased housing have a concern about Halloween. With all of the security issues lately, will trick or treating in the housing areas still happen on Halloween?

I know I'm definitely not comfortable having bumper to bumper cars driving through here. The streets are crowded with people. Everyone should be required to park somewhere else and walk here. I just think our safety is more important than trick or treating. I'm sure a lot of people are not comfortable with strangers walking through here with masks over their faces.

What will be done to ensure our safety?

Answer: The 52nd Security Forces Squadron, in conjunction with local police from Bitburg and Wittlich, will man the entry control points at the government-leased housing areas as well as increase patrol coverage within the respective areas. Vehicle traffic will be limited to host nation and U.S. residents only from 6-8 p.m. to cut down on the amount of traffic.

Additionally, wing members are encouraged to volunteer for Operation PUMPKIN PATROL to assist with the safety of the children while they are trick-or-treating. Parents accompanying small children are reminded to stay close to their child and should avoid wearing masks themselves this Halloween.

To volunteer for Operation PUMPKIN PATROL, call Staff Sgt. Edward D. Paxton at 452-6544.

Eifel's roadside shrines draw curiosity

By Iris Reiff

52nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

The tradition of building shrines and crosses along roads or in open fields in the Eifel region dates back to Roman and Germanic times. The Roman crosses; however, had a different meaning than the ones built later.

Until 460 B.C., the Romans believed demons gathered at road crossings to mislead and irritate travelers. Calling upon the "road gods," the locals made sacrifices and built crosses to chase away the demons. Other shrines built at the time-marked people's property or served as a location point for court trials.

While most of the ancient crosses have disappeared throughout the years, a large number of Christian shrines still exist.

Today, people still lay wreaths or flowers at the crosses in honor of accident victims.

Crosses that show an engraved skull with two crossing bones were built as memorials for the dead, often in honor of a father or son who didn't return from war.

Another category of crosses was built for pilgrims to pray. People prayed there for a variety of different reasons, like a good harvest.

In Binsfeld, there are two interesting crosses. The first is a plague cross, built in 1631 by the family Dietzen. It was built in memory of a family child who suffered from the plague. They often sacrificed food at the shrine for the poor and sick. The second cross, which dates back to 1551, located on Geogergstrasse, served as a postal station for the Liege, Belgium, to Vienna, Austria, postal route. It was there the post wagon exchanged horses and picked up or dropped off mail.

Not far from the Herforst government-leased housing, on a forest road, sits the Wenzelhausen wolf cross. Many people fought battles against wolves there. In celebration of their survival, people later built a cross.

Binsfeld and the immediate neighborhood have 17 road crosses, which were all built between 1551 and 1820.

This memorial was built to honor the Virgin Mary, who residents claim helped them during times of need. People with a curiosity for ancient shrines and crosses can find several just minutes from the base.

Barons loss ends season

By Rik Carr
Bitburg High School football coach

For the first time in four seasons, the Bitburg Barons watch the Division II playoffs from the sidelines after losing Saturday 21-7 to SHAPE.

The Barons, two-time defending division champions, needed to beat Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe by nine points to make the playoffs.

Special teams put Bitburg in the hole early as the Spartans took the opening kickoff 83 yards for a touchdown. The Barons appeared poised to tie the game early after marching 60 yards down the field on its first possession, only to lose a fumble on the SHAPE 5-yard line.

Bitburg's defense then held SHAPE to force a punt. A bad snap sent the Spartans punter scrambling and Bitburg sacked him deep in SHAPE territory. Travis Carr connected with Shayne Czyzewski for a 28-yard score on the next play to tie the game at seven each following a successful point-after try.

On the ensuing kickoff, Jeremy Ponce pounced on the ball at the SHAPE 46-yard line to recover a perfectly executed outside kick by Czyzewski. However, an official ruled a Baron touched the ball before it went 10 yards - SHAPE's ball. The Spartans took advantage of the call on the next play by scoring on an end around. A missed PAT resulted in a 13-7 Spartan lead.

In the closing minutes of the first half, a botched pitch by Bitburg ended up in a safety for SHAPE and a 15-7 halftime score.

Coming out after the half and looking to tie the game, another miscue derailed the Barons. SHAPE recovered a Bitburg fumble following a pass reception and returned it for the eventual 21-7 final score.

In spite of the loss, the Barons defense haunted SHAPE, sacking the quarterback seven times and dropping runners in the backfield for a loss.

Linebacker Braden Blake amassed a season-high 18 solo tackles and two and a half sacks. He also drilled a Spartan in the backfield causing a fumble late in the fourth quarter denying a potential SHAPE score.

Nose guard Brandon White had a big day as well with 13 tackles and two and a half sacks. Ponce followed with 12 tackles and Preston Runquist and Geoff Peele combined for another 11.

Seniors Carr, Josh Blake, Matt Holas, Czyzewski, Runquist, Peele, Ernest Burr and Jacob Smithree played their final high school football game.

JV action

Running back David Thomas scored twice on runs of 30 and 6 yards to lead Bitburg to a 26-0 romp of SHAPE in junior varsity action. Steve Koechle ran for another score and quarterback Demarkus Littles hit Anthony Fomicola for a two-point conversion to wrap up the offensive scoring. The defense added a score when Don Addleman recovered a fumble in the end zone.

Bitburg High School tennis players take third in division tournament

International School of Brussels ruins top Barons players victory plans

By Pete Vadney
Bitburg High School tennis coach

Top players on Bitburg High School's tennis team hoped going into the Oct. 19 divisional tournament with a No. 1 and two No. 2 seeds would bring home a championship.

The International School of Brussels had other plans for the Barons, who settled for third when play ended.

Boy's doubles teammates Ryan Warner and Josh Sparkman, seeded No. 1, defeated Hanau 6-1, 6-3 in the quarterfinals and looked poised for a championship run. The duo battled their way into the finals by beating a stubborn SHAPE team 7-5, 6-2 to set up a rematch against ISB, whom the Bitburg team defeated earlier in the season.

Bitburg won a close first game 7-6 in a tiebreaker. ISB's experience on indoor courts proved to be the decisive factor as the team went on to beat Bitburg 6-2, 6-1.

No. 2 seeds Jordan Matthews and Courtney Martz easily stopped their first-round opponents. Matthews beat No. 7 seed Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe 6-3, 6-3 in the boy's singles opening match while Martz pushed aside No. 7 seed Hanau 6-1, 6-0 in girl's action.

Both collapsed in the semifinals against ISB. Martz lost a close first match 7-5, then fell apart 6-1 to drop into the third-place round. Matthews didn't fare any better, losing in straight sets 6-3, 6-3.

Rebounding from the previous defeats, Matthews beat a persistent Patch player 9-7 while Martz struggled with SHAPE for a 6-1, 6-4 victory. Both finished in third place.

The girl's doubles team of Kara Carline and Erica Shipp quickly left the tournament losing to teams from Patch and Hanau.

The Barons tennis team wraps up the season Saturday and Sunday at the European Championships in Wiesbaden. Matthews and Martz qualified in singles play and Warner and Sparkman in doubles. The field consists of players from throughout Europe.
